"The construction of the John Kline Retreat Center was a great project and through it came lasting relationships that contributed to our selection as the contractor for this year's rebuild of the Becker Retreat Center. Rex Miller has been great to work with. His understanding of construction and his ability to make decisions made the first project go very smoothly. While unfortunate that it took a fire to begin our relationship with Camp Mack, it has been rewarding to partner with them in the development of new improved facilities that will help Camp Mack continue to impact young people and adults for many years to come"

History:

- Following a fire to Becker Lodge in 2010, Camp Mack and DJ Construction partnered to build the new John Kline Welcome Center that includes offices, meeting rooms, kitchen, dining center, library, and spacious lobby.
- The 19,500 square foot building features high vaulted ceilings, a large outdoor deck, and fieldstone on the fireplace and exterior.
- The Welcome Center is a "green" building that incorporates many energy efficient features, recycled materials, and an adjacent greenhouse.
- Ground will be broken in 2014 to rebuild the Becker Retreat Center, replacing the lodging rooms lost in the fire. It also will contain common gathering spaces and meeting rooms.
